

Digital Fine Art Printing

Giclée (pronounced "jee-clay") is an extremely high quality ink-jet printing process that produces beautiful digital reproductions that last much longer than those produced using traditional 'commercial' printing techniques. The very latest inks are said to offer up to 70 years light-fastness and UV-resistance.

This sophisticated reproduction technology not only utilises more colours than regular printing, but also has an unparalleled vibrancy and detail.

This is why Giclée printing is widely regarded as the very best fine art printing method currently available - and why it has been embraced by so many galleries, artists and museums as their preferred method of art reproduction since its 'invention' in the late 1980s.

We can reproduce from your own digital file, or we can photograph your original for a more accurate result. See 'Additional Services' below for more information.
